

New for 2010: The Nordegren Driver

Featuring technology developed at its Mississippi research facility, Nike Golf has announced their new line of drivers. The club's grip, shaft and head are completely oversized and this model comes with a unique headcover. It extends and protects the entire length of the club to prevent the potential blemishes and discoloration that can occur during and after the course of play.

Nike Golf spokesman Andrew Pinske commented on the new club's design. "With its low facial profile and high torque shaft, this club should help players everywhere avoid those embarrassing short drives that seem to go nowhere as well as drives into trees."

No word yet on when the club will be available for play. "Definitely 2010", was all we could get Nike officials to say.
